PART II TEACHING PLAN

Introduction

ATTENTION: Good afternoon. How are you this afternoon? Hope that you are all feeling good.

MOTIVATION: As I stated last week, ceremonial honors are a solemn affair. A few weeks from now, we will conduct a formal retreat at the school flagpole and have the honor of securing the US flag from its lofty perch atop that pole.

OVERVIEW: Today, we will continue practicing the retreat ceremony that we started last week.

TRANSITION: FALL IN!

Body

MP 1 The instructor will describe the sequence of events and walk the unit through each phase, making corrections as needed before moving on to the next phase. Those areas needing emphasis will be clearly defined based on last week's practice.

MP 2 The squadron will be formed as prescribed in AFM 36-2203, Drill and Ceremonies. The cadet commander, as previously practiced in squadron drill, commands all movements.

MP 3 After forming the squadron, the cadet commander will command Right, FACE. The flight commanders, guidon bearer, first sergeant, and cadet commander will take their in column positions. The cadet commander issues the command Forward, MARCH and the unit departs from point A (ceremonial unit forming area) to point B (retreat area). (Note: The practice area need not be at the flagpole.)

The cadet commander will detach himself (peel off) from the column and march to a predesignated position, halt, and face to the right. He will command Squadron, HALT at the appropriate time so that the unit is centered on him. He will command Left FACE. The guidon bearer, flight commanders, and first sergeant take their in line positions.

When all movement ceases he will command Dress Flights To The Right. The flight commanders will face about and command Dress Right DRESS, sequentially. They will proceed through the normal dressing sequence and give Ready, FRONT, when finished. Each will retake his normal in line position.

The cadet commander will then command Parade, REST. The cadet commander will face about and assume the position of parade rest. At the specified time for retreat, he will come to the position of attention and command SOUND RETREAT and return to parade rest. After retreat is sounded, the commander comes to the position of attention, faces about, and commands Squadron, ATTENTION, and Present, ARMS, faces about and executes present arms.

The national anthem or TO THE COLORS is played (not at the practice). When the last note of the music has been played and the flag is firmly grasped by the flag detail he will execute order arms, face about and command Order, ARMS.

If the flag detail is practicing with the ceremonial unit, they will go through their procedure and leave the area. The cadet commander will face the formation and command Right, FACE. In column positions will be taken by those concerned and the commander will command Forward, MARCH and the ceremonial unit will leave the area

MP 4 The instructor will critique the practice and dismiss the unit.

(Note: If a band or bugler is not available, arrangements should be made for a public address system to be set up adjacent to the retreat area for playing the required music. This coordination should be accomplished with sufficient lead-time to assure proper operation when needed.)

Conclusion

SUMMARY: During our session today, we polished the basics of a retreat ceremony.

REMOTIVATION: Our next formal drill meeting will be the last drill session of the year and we will conduct a formal retreat at the flagpole. I hope to have many dignitaries present for this ceremony. I know that you will "strut your stuff."

CLOSURE: FALL OUT!
